Michael Eig and Associates have been representing educationally-disabled children for 35 years, advocating for each student's individual right to an appropriate education and to a life of quality and opportunity. The attorneys can provide assistance at any stage of the special education process, from before eligibility is determined to due process hearings, through the appeals process in the courts. Our expertise and connections in the greater Washington, D.C. community help us to work on behalf of our clients to secure special education services and to help ensure that the rights of parents and student under the IDEA are protected.

Call for help collaborating with individuals who have knowledge of children with special needs and navigating the public special education process.
