Middle and high school years are a time of transition for many students, but for students with disabilities that transition can be marked with difficulty. VersAbility's Ability Club systematically reinforces social skills needed to build meaningful relationships for students with autism, autism spectrum, intellectual disabilities, and other social or communication disorders.

The Ability Club is a six-week program led by VersAbility's Positive Behavior Support Facilitator with peer mentoring from high school students and college volunteers. students with disabilities improve their social, conversational, turn-taking, and routine skills in order to build meaningful relationships. Ability Club also focuses on personal safety within the community, particularly when engaging with first responders.
